Until the 19th century, linear algebra was introduced through systems of linear equations and matrices. In modern mathematics, the presentation through vector spaces is generally preferred, since it is more synthetic, more general (not limited to the finite-dimensional case), and conceptually simpler, although more abstract.. A vector space over a field F (often the field of the real numbers ...

Unfortunately these laws fell far short of what is required to justify even some of the most elementary results in algebra, like those involving subtraction. In "On the foundation of algebra," 1839, the first of four papers on this topic by De Morgan that appeared in the Transactions of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, one finds a tribute to the separation of symbols in algebra, and ...
